Since its establishment in 1877, Fort Huachuca has been at the center of southwestern military history. The Huachuca Mountains at our shoulder have witnessed the arrival, in the high Arizona desert, of the columns of the U.S. Army in 1846 opening the trails to the California gold fields; the Soldier-scientists who followed in their wake to add to the bounty of knowledge; the brief collision of blue and gray clad Soldiers of a divided nation; the American Army that captured our Apache warriors like Cochise, Victoria and Geronimo; the Buffalo Soldiers who pursued Mexican desperados across our southwest border and those same Buffalo Soldiers who also trained two infantry divisions for fighting in World War II; the birth of electronic warfare; the coming together of a headquarters for U.S. Army Intelligence; and the training of UAS pilots to maintain situational awareness over the battlefield. Under the watch of the timeless Huachuca's more than a century of change has swept the valley below. Progress has been made in uniforms, weapons, technology, tactics and doctrine. But as much as the story of Fort Huachuca is about this, it is also about those things which are as constant as Huachuca Peak on the horizon—the Soldiers' values which form the bedrock for Huachuca heritage.

The History of Greely Hall. Adolphus Washington Greely enlisted in the Army shortly after the outbreak of the Civil War on July 26th, 1861 at 17 years of age.

By 1881 First Lieutenant Greely was given command of the Lady Franklin Bay Expedition to collect astronomical and polar magnetic data as well as to search for clues of the USS Jeanette which was lost in the Arctic two years prior. Despite having no previous Arctic experience Greely and his team were able to discover many miles along the coast of northwest Greenland and in 1882 Greely sighted a mountain range and further named them the Conger Range. After two unsuccessful supply parties failed to reach Greely and his team, he was forced to retreat south to Cape Sabine expecting to find food and equipment depots from supply ships but these had not been provided. By the time the rescue expedition reached Greely and his 25 man crew, nineteen had perished from starvation, drowning, hypothermia, and even an execution of Private Henry ordered by Greely his self.

After twenty years as a lieutenant, President Grover Cleveland appointed Greely as Chief Signal Officer of the U.S. Army with the rank of brigadier General. During his tenure multiple military telegraph lines were constructed and operated during the Spanish-American War, from Puerto Rico, Cuba, the Philippines, and Alaska and even under very adverse conditions General Greely constructed a telegraph system of nearly 4,000 miles consisting of submarine cables, land cables, and wireless telegraphy. After being promoted to Major General on February 10th, 1906 he retired two years later on March 27th, 1908.

Retired Major General Greely is honored by the Alaskan Military Installation, Fort Greely, a Russian island named after, Greely Island, and even our own Greely Hall was named after this extraordinary man!

The Army Song

"The Army Goes Rolling Along"

Verse:

March along, sing our song, with the Army of the free.
Count the brave, count the true, who have fought to victory.
We're the Army and proud of our name!
We're the Army and proudly proclaim:

First Chorus:

First to fight for the right,
And to build the Nation's might,
And the Army goes rolling along.
Proud of all we have done,
Fighting till the battle's won,
And the Army goes rolling along.

Refrain:

Then it's hi! hi! hey!
The Army's on its way.
Count off the cadence loud and strong;
For where're we go,
You will always know
That the Army goes rolling along.
